

Souvenir of Edmonton
ALBERTA

N more than one occasion wonderful stories have come from the West telling of the remarkable growth enjoyed by many cities and towns. Among the cities whose growth has been so phenomenal there is no greater example than that of the City of Edmonton. It has been said that Edmonton is bigger than its size, and very true is the statement, for not only does it supply the demand of some 25,000 inhabitants, but it is the feeder and distributor to 50,000 square miles of surrounding country.

Some cities have enjoyed large expansions, due to booms of one kind and another. Not so with Edmonton. Edmonton's growth is due purely to natural advantages, railway facilities, and Provincial location. These, placed in the hands of competent and energetic men, have placed Edmonton in such a position that in the future it promises to surpass many of the older and larger cities.

The fact is, that with proposed lines and those already completed, Edmonton is the central point for thirteen different railway lines. This advantage has led many eastern and other manufacturers to open at Edmonton, for there is no city in Alberta that can offer such excellent accommodation.

The same shrewd business forethought which played so important a part in her location has spread among the owners of homes, among such institutions as the Board of Trade, and School Board, etc., and among the Civic Officials, with the result that every man, woman and child is willing to back this city to the last cent of their resources.

100,000 population is the mark the people of Edmonton are aiming for in ten years, and from the success so far and the enthusiasm displayed, one is inclined to think that they will reach the desired mark.

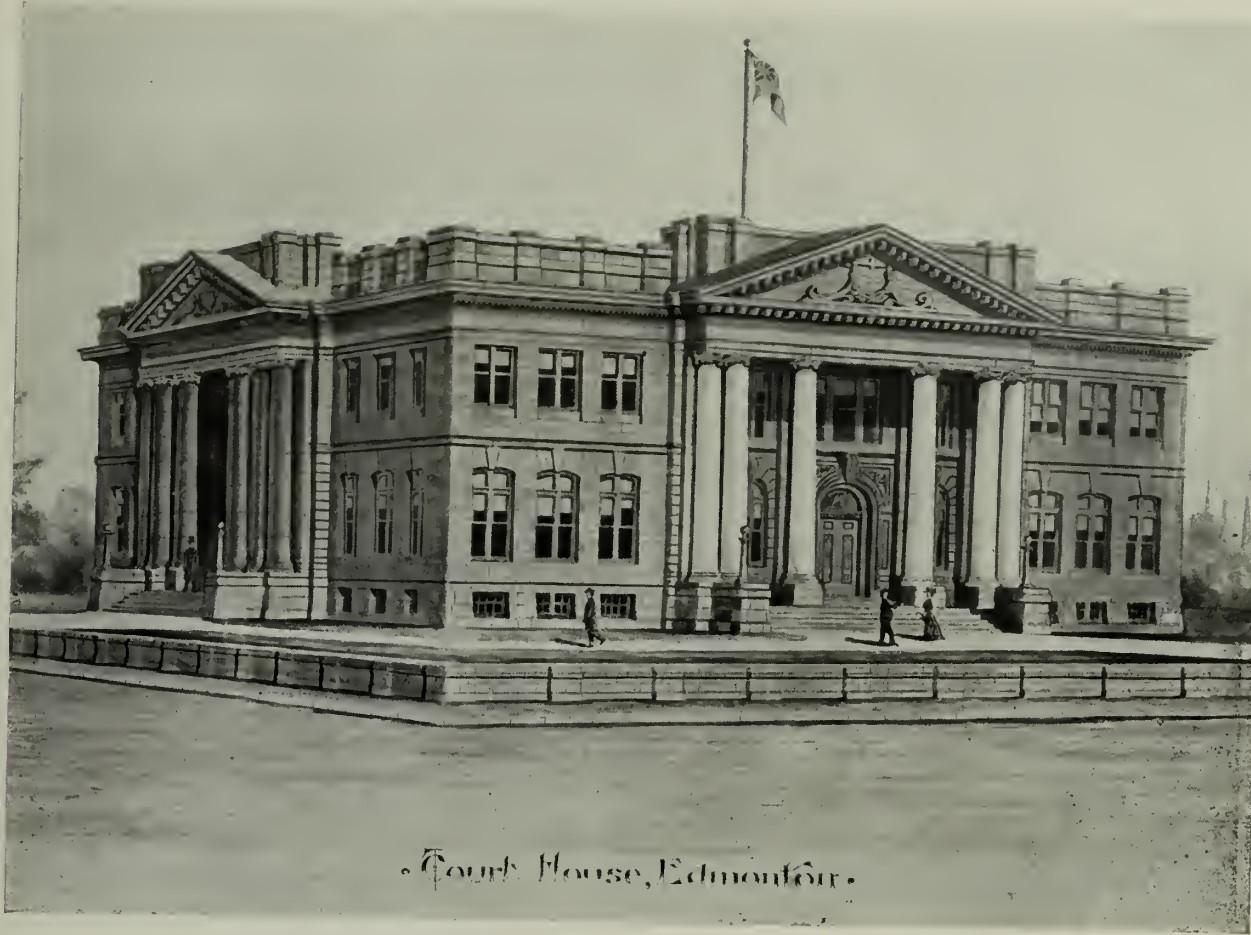

Edmonton has some twenty-five churches and places of worship, many of which will compare to advantage with churches in the larger cities.

Being the city of the Provincial Government, Edmonton is the residential home of the Lieutenant-Governor, and also of many of the Cabinet Ministers, with the result that Edmonton enjoys a prominent place in the social life of the Province.

To the man who would establish business in Western Canada, Edmonton will strongly commend itself. It has central location and natural advantages that few cities can offer.
